SPORTING INTELLIGENCE.

Great Fight Between Mace and Brettle, Wednesday, September 19.

[From the London Sporting Life, Sept. 22.] This event, which has created intense excitement among sporting circles since it was first made, came off on Wednesday, the 19th inst. To make our report of this great fistic contest complete, we give the performance of

Robert Brettel rist introduced his nob mos this world fortculle A. D. 1854, and a the act of a twenty in Great fortculle A. D. 1854, and a the act of a twenty in Great made in a produced to treat the act of trouble A. D. 1854, and a the act of a twenty in the fortunal of the control of the Mace fell backwards, although no claim was made for kneck down blows.

Rouse 4.—Directly they scratched Brettle invested with his left, on the sneezer, and the crimson fluid began to flow from Mace somewhat copiously. Nothing daunted, Mace stood for no repairs, and drew more of the rosy from Bob's snout, with terrific force by a left hander. The men then closed, and struggled for the throw, which was eventually gained by Mace, who seemed full of lighting, and increasing in confidence every moment.

Rouse 5.—The deliveries on both sides were rapid and effective; but Brettle had evidently the worst of it, and his friends were thoroughly astonished at the manner in which the Norwich man was performing. The oilds, in point of fact, were now upon Mace, and if and It of was now offered on him, as it had previously bear to 4 was now offered on him, as it had previously been open his adversary. They went ding dong at it, Bob planting his right on Mace's left peoper, which was the only visible mark upon him which seemed in any way queer. Jem returned the compliment by another stinger on the conk, and more of the roby became apparent. A second smack with the left drew a more copious supply of Chateau Margaux. A wild rally, which was ended by Brettle slipping up.

is when the first in the series of the control of t

cye, while the left peeper was only slightly discolored—so stightly, that one had to look close to detect it. Bob Bristic arrived, in company with his friends, about half-paet seven, and his appearance was an awful contrast to the Norwich hero. It was evidently chop falsen and dispirited from the unexpected Tartar he had caught, and his physicignomy had not improved by his night's rest. His right ogic was as black as a coal, and the left was not only fear-fully dark, but the cut under it was onen and quiy. The lips and nose were also much awollen and brussed, and the Bruns looked anything but greatified at the alteration the night had made in his mag. The rush at the alteration to obtain tickets was not greatly inconvenient, as many who were present on the trest day had decilined a second journey, and the attendance of Corinthans had diminished considerably. As the morning progressed the white thick mist which had hing ever the marsh and meadow gradually cleared away, and the san broke cut with the ering effect. From Tibury the train turned oil for southend, and that celebrated cockney sea side retreat was reached with a farsy and colority at twenty minutes past ten o'clock.

After a step of about half an hour, in which time great execution was done with the provisions, a general move was made to beast, but as the Southent piter is a mile and a quarter in length, those fond of pedestrianism were in dulged with a nice level walk. About tail way down tho pier Mace's backer (who by the by had engaged the seamboats on his own responsibility, totally independent of the Brettle party) was stationed, assisted by one or two well known pugs, and they prevented air further progress to the steamboats, until the required face for the water excursion had been disbursed. This was a vast improvement in the arrangements for the sight between Mace and Bob Traves, who started from the same party, we attend to a substantial party, but a former of the pier, had soon as a single from the same party of the pier. Mace of the pier, bu circumstance which elicited much grambling from Mace's party, and taunting cries of, 'Ohl obl you're waiting for the police." After a little delay the belligerents stood up exactly at half past one for the police." THE RENEWID FIGHT.

Roend 1.—immediately the men advanced from their corrers it was plain that the advantage was all in Mace's favor. His left cyo, it is true, was slightly descelored, but he bore no other marks of pasishmont whatever. Ou the contrary, Brettle had both his peepers in mourning, and had also a cut under his left daylight. There was no betting, for the obvious reason that not a soul upon the ground imagined, for a moment, that he Birmingham champion was able, in this condition, to cope with such a powerful adversary as he had facing him. The offers were 3 to 1 freely upon Mace, and no takers. Directly Brettle got to the middle of the ring, he led off with his left, and then commenced to dance round his opponent on all aides, in order to avoid any re visitation of the punishment he had experienced on the previous day. Mace waited patiently for a moment or so, and whom he found that Brettle was determined to act upon the defensive, he immediately assumed the opposite course. He dashed out with his terrific left, and caught Brettle bang upon the jaw, while Bub bravely returned upon the body. After a feint, Brettle sagain ran round his man, and by a slip to mother earth, escaped bace's intended right, which was dealt out with a vigor that showed his determination to do or die on the field of action.

Royn: 2.—Brettle was evidently pricked, and made up his mind to try and do all he know. He three in one of his heavy lunges with the right, but Mace never fluched from "the auctioner," and seemed to consider it as mere child's play, as the blow fell upon the bread-basket. Jem got to his left despite of Bob's shiftness, but was collared on the smeller, which bled immediately. Jem forced the fighting, as he had done from the first to last on the previous day, got his opponent's head into chancer, him, as too good a guard was kept on the citadel, and it was all "Lombard street to a China orange" on Maco. Jem put in another facer, and when the men closed Bob once more slipped on the ground, cridently in an exhaust-kindaces were shown to the captives; the authorities allowed them every possible consideration. In the course of the foliowing (yesterday) morning Brettle, the Cruich ley's, and Damper were brought up before a beach of magistrates, Mr. Beard, the solicitor, having been summoned to defend the party. After a short examination Brettle was olicharged from outlody, there being in the opinion of the beach no case against him; but Grutchley and Bamper, against whom the police produced evidence of fighting, were remanded on bif until Monday week, a worthy heat of the town, although unknown to the men, standing bail. The proceedings were perfectly unconstitutional, and we rejoice that poor flob got so well out of his first difficulty, and we boge that all who have colors of him will "shell out" at once, and show their appreciation of this good, game fellow, who came up galantly account time, when for time was dead against him.

The backers of Mace, for his galant conduct and bravery, intend presenting him with a beit, one of the hand-somest hiterto produced. However valuable that beit may be, we can only say that he richly deserved this henceable trophy. Mace and friends cailed at our office yeareday, and beyond a elight aveiling of the lip and the least discoloration of the left up, there were no traces of having met such a formidable antagonist as the recowned Bob. We see nothing at present to prevent Mace being Champion of England, and doubtless lem has less as eye to that trophy, the contest for which has recently shock both hemispheres.

The snorthest choice of this sity have been anticipallag.

THE BING IN NEW YORK. sporting circles of this city have been anticipating the arrangement of a match between Aaron Jines (who trained the Benicia Boy for his fight with Morrissey) and Tom Jennings, of New Orleans, a fresh aspirant for pugi listic honors, for the cum of $1,000 seide. From a card published by Jeenings in our advertising columns this day, it will be seen that no match has yet been made, a disagreement respecting the time and place of fighting proventing the two parties coming to terms.

Cricket.

MATCHES BETWEEN BASE BALL PLAYERS AND CHICKET-FRS, AND SETWEEN RESVEN AMERICAN AND ELEVEN ENGLISH CRICKETERS.

The cricketing season is drawing rapidly to a close, and ith a view of appropriately winding up the season of outdoor sports two highly interesting matches have been arranged. The first is played to morrow on the cricket ground at Hoboken belonging to the New York Club, and is between eleven members of that club and an equal number of base bail players, rejected from the various clubs of New York and Brooklyn. One innings each at cricket and base ball will be played, and to render the is, each side will comprise half cricketers and half base ball players. At some of the most accomplished players ball piayers. As some of the most accomplished players of the two games will take part in this match, it will prove one of the most interesting and exciting contents ever witnessed by the admirers of outdoor recreations, as well as being the first of the kind ever played.

The second match takes piace at East New York on Wedecaday (provided the day is fine), and is between cloves American and an equatinumber of English cricketers. This match has been arranged entirely by the Long Island Cricket Clubs, and is designed as a benefit to Mr. Sams, the able profusional cricketer, who is suffering from deciting health. It is the first occasion that eleven American cricketers have ever essayed to play an equal number of Englishmen at their own national game, and the former are sanguine of beating their opponents on this occasion. The following are the players selected, who are confined exclusively to Long Island.—

Assumans.—Mesers Alvey, Flatbush Club: Garrison, Queens County; Dr. Andrews, East New York; Dr. Parker, Riggs County; Hodor, Long Island; Cricket Mine, Brainard, C. Walden and Grum, of the American Cricket Glub.

Escussa: Mesers Labon and Petty, Long Island Club; Stacey and Leeter, Kings County; Harst and Holden, East New York; Byron and Harding, Flatbush Club.

The wickets will be pitched at nine o'clock A. M. if the Club.

The wickets will be pitched at time o'clock A. M if the day is fine. Should the weather be unfavorable, the match will be pertponed until the next fine day. The carrying direct from Fulton ferry to the ground at East New York.
